FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WEDNESDAY, April 3-6 P. M. Secretary Chase has inaugurated his adminis secretary Chase has inaugurated his administration of the Treasury Department with a blunder as gross as any that were ever committed by his predecessor, Secretary Cobb. He has arbitrarily rejected all bids for the new loan which offered less than 94 per cent. He has thus declined $30,839,000 which were offered to the government, and accepted $3,077,000 only out of the $8,000,000 which he requires.

In coming to this decision, Mr. Chase has not only laid himself open to a charge of unfairness to the public which came forward so liberally to lend him money, but he has run a risk which no government officer has a right to incur. It does government officer has a right to incur. It does not escape the public eye that of the $3,077,000 of successful bids, $2,500,000 came from one institution in this city. Mr. Chase must not be surprised if people cavil at his drawing the line so as just to render this large bid successful, when a variation of a fraction either way would either have excluded this bid, or would have admitted enough other bids to have secured the whole negotiation. The law, it is true, gave Mr. Chase the right to reject unsatisfactory bids. But was it politic to court a charge of corrupt favoritism? Was it wise to repel so arbitrarily the aid offered to the government by the public at large? To Mr. Chase, are the national finances in a condition to justify such a highhanded poli-cy? Singular to state, the Washington corres-pondent of this paper telegraphed us on the evening of Monday—some sixteen or seventeen hours before the award—that no bid under 94 would be successful. Must it be inferred that the Secretary had really arrived at this decision, and had privatey communicated it to his friends? These coniderations are of less moment, however, than the public mischtef which may ensue from Mr. Chase's decision. He now wants $5,000,000 more of the public. At the hour we write, certain speculators and moneyed men, in total ignorance of what may have happened during the in Florida, very dimly conscious of what is going on in Virginia, and utterly unacquainted with the policy of the general government at Washington, are perhaps ready to advance this amount. But what if next morning's mail should bring news of a fight on the Rio Grande or at Fort Pickens? What if the secessionists of Virginia overawe the Convention, and carry that State out of the Union? What if the President should call an extra session of Congress for the purpose of passing a Force bill? Mr. Chase would find, in that emergency, that his friends would hasten to break off pending negotiations; he would be lucky if some of the successful bidders for the $3.077,000 awarded did not try to evade their bargain, as other successful bidders did in October last. Where would Mr. Lincoln's administration be if an emergency of this kind occurred, and it were discovered that there was no money in the Treasury, in consequence of Mr. Chase's arbitrary selection of the cabalistic figure 94 as the lowest point at which he would accept loans? The only defence that is made for Mr. Chase is that by rejecting bids below 94 he saved the gov-ernment some money. It has been computed that had Mr. Chase awarded the whole of his $8,000,000 to the bidders in regular order, the discount which the government would have had to pay would have amounted to about $35,000 more than it would have been had the whole loan gone at 94. By drawing the line at 94, Mr. Chase saved $35,000 rather more than half the profit which the Bank of Commerce makes, at to-day's prices, on its successful award. The following is a list of the successful bidders:-

The money market is quite easy: the award wil not create much inquiry, so large is the amount of dle money in the street. Call loans are offered everywhere at. 5 per cent; short acceptances. prime, go at the same figure; and longer paper at a 7. The steady progress of liquidation is reducing the amount of paper on the market very rapidly.

Nothing was done in foreign exchange to-day. The stock market opened dull this morning, and weakness was evinced in most securities, with the exception of governments. The new sixes were in demand, every one being anxious to supply the consumptive demand, which is revealed by the recent list of bids; 96 was the last price this morning. State stocks were generally lower. All the speculative stocks were rather lower, and closed weak the following being the last quotations:-United States 5's, 1874, 891/4

JOHN OSBORN, 45 BRAVER STREET.

JOHN OSBORN, 45 BRAVER STREET, AGENT FOR THE VINE GROWERS COMPANY
In soliciting orders from the trade in the United States and the bouthern confederacy for direct shire the Branches of the trade of the company and the southern confederacy for direct shire cloquace Branches of the trade of the following facts:

This company, with a capital of three million france, is principally composed of more than fourteen hundred proprietors of vineyards in the district of Cognac, who, being shareholders in the company, take a natural interest in and watch over its prosperity as a pet institution established by themselves for the sale of their own pure Cognac Branches, and not those of other and less favored districts; the company, with a view to the accomp ishment of the principal object of its mission, is stringently bound down by its statute of regulations not to purchase any brandy except such as shall have been wholly, distilled from wine, and be also the produce of vineyarder-sisting within the limits of Cognac, and is, therftore, strictly inhibited to admit into its storehouser any brandy whatever which may have had its origin outside the said district.

As it was owing to a fixed determination on the part of the its brand mark by the unquestionable excellence of its sup-ments.

The importation of brandy in bottles, heretofore prohibit, ed, being henceforward permitted by one of the few rational elauses of the Tariff bill of the immortal Mr. Morrill, those wine merchants who favor the agent of the Company with their orders for direct importations, in their own names, will reap the advantage of that mode of placing pure Cognac, Brandy within reach of consumers in every part of the two friendly confederacies, which recently composed the United States of America, in an increased demand for the Vine Growers' Company's Brandy; and the profits of the distribu-

The balance of the stock of the bottled brandy of the Company, consisting of the "three years old" and the "antedfis vian" put up previously to the passage of the present law-every bottle being sealed with the metallic capsule of the Vine Growers' Company, the corks bearing the same stamp, and the labels containing an eract description of the content of the bottles to which they are affixed, under the personal of the bottles to which they are affixed, under the personal content of the con
